Addressing Self-Determination in Transitions

Attendees will be able to identify situations that are often misattributed to laziness; will be able to generate reasonable explanations for a person's struggle to transition; will have more insight into the possible negative influence of the pandemic on transitions; and will be able to better identify areas for intervention in assisting individuals on the Spectrum with difficult transitions. Attendees will also hear from panelists as they share their personal experiences with transitions as living in their daily lives; how they've had to change and adapt; and adding positive ways that they didn't see in transition.
